

DODD'S MEN PUSH CLOSE AFTER VILLA

ANOTHER CLASH WITH FLEEING BANDITS IS REPORTED BUT RESULT IS UNKNOWN.

TO EMPLOY INFANTRY

Foot Soldiers Will Be Tried Out As Mountain Climbers in Search for Villa in Mexican Wilds.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Camp of General J. J. Pershing at the front, April 2, by aeroplane to Comandante, N. M., April 3.—American cavalrymen encountered a feeling force of Villa men near early today and sounds of firing have been heard from that direction, but no report has been made to headquarters as to the result.

Carry Villa into Hills.

The mountains of Guerrero are being combed thoroughly for Villa by the American forces, but nothing has been learned as to his whereabouts other than that captured bandits said he was being carried farther into the mountains in his jolting coach.

General Pershing announced today that troops of the infantry are to be used for mountain climbing in the search for Villa, co-operating with the cavalrymen, who have borne the brunt of the five days' pursuit of the bandits.

The infantrymen have been going through barbed wire preparation in hill climbing marches for about two weeks and their officers say they are in excellent physical condition.

The troops were closely behind Villa yesterday evening the village of...

On Lookout for Bandit.

Two squadrons of cavalry entered the village from opposite sides, simultaneously. Every preparation had been made for engagements which failed to develop. There have been a number of minor skirmishes in the vicinity of the village, two scouts reporting today they encountered two Villa men on the hillside yesterday, and fought for five minutes without result.

American air scouts are now flying over the entire Villa territory and are carrying dispatches from the front to the field base and field headquarters. Motor trucks also have been able to penetrate the mountain waste almost as far as the territory occupied by the cavalry under General George B. Dodd.

To Seize Mercantile Stocks. Carranza has issued a decree providing for the seizure and sale at public auction of the stocks of merchants who have fled from their places of business, according to a message reaching the Mexican consulate here today.

The announced plan is to take over the stock of any store that has been closed, make an inventory, sell goods at auction, turn the funds over to the owner and refuse him further license to do business.

Headed for Chihuahua. El Paso, April 3.—Reports from Mexican sources in the interior received here today, asserted Francisco Villa was headed toward Chihuahua, and his emissaries were attempting to secure the garrison of that town from their allegiance to the defunct government.

The border is again a hive of sensational rumors. The majority of these are based on stories brought from the interior by Mexicans, and the few Americans who struggle in here say they are two daily. The most circumstantial of these stories at present are based on reports brought from the interior by Mexicans, and the few Americans who struggle in here say they are two daily.

Deny Cano Revolt. Laredo, Tex., April 3.—Military authorities here, located opposite here, declared today the reported defection of Col. Cano's forces in Chihuahua was untrue. They said the Chihuahuans were loyal and that there was no indication for the apprehension of Villa.

HOLLAND EXHAUSTS RESERVE OF WHEAT

Importation of 100,000 Tons From America Will Be Sought to Relieve Serious Shortage.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Hague, via London, April 3.—The reserves of wheat in Holland are exhausted and the Associated Press is informed on the very highest authority that the government intends to import 100,000 tons of wheat in addition to normal 60,000 monthly in order to reform the needed reserve.

At Dutch ships have been requisitioned under the new law to carry these supplies from America.

The disappearance of the reserve is due to failure of the Holland-American steamship companies to fulfill contracts for carrying wheat and corn from America to Europe.

Other steamship companies to fulfill contracts for carrying wheat and corn from America to Europe.

There has been a request for the purchase of 75,000 tons of corn monthly, and the above mentioned purchase of 100,000 tons of wheat and corn is needed every month.

Cotton manufacturers are manifesting uneasiness in requisitioning of cargo space for the importation of needed supplies of new cotton from America.

SENTIMENT FAVORS PHILIPP DELEGATES

INDICATIONS POINT TO VICTORY FOR UNINSTRUCTED G. O. P.

CONFIDENT OF RESULT

Conservatives Expect to Carry First,
Second, Fourth, Fifth, Eighth and Ninth Districts Handily.

With the campaign for the election of delegates to the republican national convention on June 16th practically ended, Gov. Philipp returns to Milwaukee on Sunday. He may go to Madison to attend to state business on Monday but will return to Milwaukee to vote on Tuesday.

The governor addressed a large audience of farmers at Bear creek, in Outagamie county, on Saturday, and was especially pleased over his reception there. He talked about the problems of the farm and devoted little time to politics.

Conservatives Are Confident. With the next twenty-four hours to be spent in arranging to get out the vote, the conservatives are confident of the result. In all the districts the candidates have conducted hard campaigns, and in every precinct in the state there are men who are working for the ticket headed by Gov. Philipp because they believe it represents the principles of the republican party. Newspapers generally are supporting the ticket.

It is confidently believed that the delegates at large on the Philipp ticket will be elected. In the districts the same confidence prevails. The results in the First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Eighth and Ninth will be known Tuesday night, as these districts are expected to give the Philipp candidates a decisive plurality and one in which the result will be known early.

In the Third, both sides claim the election, and it is probable that the result will not be known until the final returns are in. In the Sixth, Emil Kramer of Fond du Lac and William Rahr of Manitowoc have made a strong campaign, and probably will be elected, but the result will be too close for early forecasts.

Strong for Philipp. In the Seventh, Senator Frank Hanson and Albert Knudson are the Philipp candidates. The district is the best fighting ground in the state for the La Follette men, but the prediction is made that there, too, the republican will be successful.

The race will be close. In the Tenth, both sides claim the election, and it is probable that the result will not be known until the final returns are in. In the Sixth, Emil Kramer of Fond du Lac and William Rahr of Manitowoc have made a strong campaign, and probably will be elected, but the result will be too close for early forecasts.

Zeppelin Airships.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, April 3.—Ten persons were killed, and 11 injured in Scotland in Sunday night's Zeppelin raid. It was officially announced this afternoon. There were no casualties in England.

Rain Bomb on Edinburgh and Leith Dock establishments on the Firth of Forth and important shipbuilding works on the Tyne were attacked in last night's Zeppelin raid. The raid was the first since the Zeppelins were ordered to leave the British coast.

Several of the Zeppelins were seen in the Firth of Forth and the Tyne. They were seen to drop bombs on the shipbuilding yards and docks. The raid was the first since the Zeppelins were ordered to leave the British coast.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, April 3.—Senator Cummins' amendment to the senate army bill to create a national guard section of five state officers in the general staff was adopted by the senate today by a vote of thirty-five to thirty.

The vote was a defeat for Senator Chamberlain and the military committee, which had asked the senate to place national guard officers in such positions of high trust. The vote was the first in the senate on the army bill.

URGENT ACTION ON BRANDEIS NOMINATION

SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE
PROPOSES TO VOTE ON REC-OMMENDATION ISSUE.

TWO ADVERSE REPORTS

Senator Works Declares Candidate
Packs Judicial Temperament—
Cummins Also Has Criticism.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, April 3.—Action on the nomination of Louis D. Brandeis to the supreme court, was proposed today by the senate judiciary committee after it had received reports from all five senators on the sub-committee which held the hearings. Senator Fletcher, democrat, made a report merely recommending confirmation, Senator Walsh made a long report, and Senator Cummins and Works made reports against confirmation.

Senator Walsh declared in his report: "The real crime of which this man is guilty, is that he has exposed the iniquities of men in high places in the name of the majesty of wealth."

It is easy for a brilliant lawyer to conduct himself as a reformer, to condemn and vilify. All he needs to do is to drift with the tide. If he ever assails the door of evil who stands high in the market place, either in court or before the public, he will have no enemies or detractor or none that he need heed. The man who never represents the public or the impetuous citizen in any great forensic contest, but always a creature of corporate wealth, never has these troubles. It is always the other fellow whose professional character is a little below par."

Criticizes His Temperament. "An analysis of the evidence has led me irresistibly to conclude the nomination should be rejected," said Senator Cummins. "I am in sympathy with much work Mr. Brandeis has been doing to better economic, industrial and social conditions. Much of this, I am convinced, he has done, generally, conscientiously and for the common good."

"Some of his friends say he is a radical and for that reason has offended the conservatives. That may be true, but I believe that the man who has made him many enemies, would detract from his usefulness as a judge. He is of the material that makes good judges, but not good or safe judges. To place a man on the supreme court bench who rests under a cloud, would be a grievous mistake."

Senator Cummins, who is chairman of the nominees for his course in the railroad five per cent increase rate case, was made public yesterday, submitted general conclusions.

"I am in sympathy for the most part with his sociological and economic opinions," said he, "and for the work that he has done in these directions. I have nothing but commendation for his course in many of the matters, which have been brought to the attention of the sub-committee through which he has passed. I have confidence of so large an element of the profession of which he is a member, and of the country of which he is a citizen, as to vitally impair his usefulness as justice of the supreme court."

Berlin, wireless to Sayville, April 3.—The press of Sweden has been animated against the British order in council cancelling adherence to certain sections of the declaration of London, which make distinction between the principles of the declaration and national contraband.

"These newspapers state that as a matter of fact Great Britain previously had adhered to the principles of the declaration. The indignation of Stockholm says the situation is serious and calls for a united Swedish policy to protect the nation's rights."

PROGRESSIVE CONVENTION FOR STATE OF MISSOURI
OPENS IN KANSAS CITY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Kansas City, Mo., April 3.—The state convention of the progressive party is being held here today with 727 delegates from the 114 counties of the state. The main business of the convention will be the selection of delegates to the national convention to be held at Chicago.

Missouri is entitled to twenty-four delegates at the Chicago meeting. Four of them will be elected at large. Each county in the state is entitled to delegates to the convention here with one additional for each 250 votes or major fraction thereof cast for Roosevelt in 1912. The City of St. Louis, constituted as a county under the state laws, will have the largest delegation, being entitled to 101 delegates under the ruling for representation made by the state committee of which L. A. Ellis, of Kansas City, is chairman. Jackson county, including Kansas City comes second with ninety-five accredited delegates here today.

Los Angeles, April 3.—The withdrawal of National Coghlan, chief of counsel for defense, and Edwin V. McKenzie, his assistant, both of San Francisco, was announced just before David Caplan, was called to trial for fourth of alleged dynamiters of Los Angeles Times building. The reason for their withdrawal was given in their letter to Thos. Lee Woolwine, district attorney.

BRIGHAM TALKS TO FRATERNAL ORDERS

GIVES SPECIAL ADDRESS SUNDAY EVENING TO REPRESENTATIVES OF LOCAL LODGES.

BROTHERHOOD IS TOPIC

All Fraternal Men Should Be in the Church.—Best Exemplification of Brotherhood, Declares Methodist Pastor.

Nearly all of the fraternal organizations of this city were represented at the services held at the Cargill Memorial Methodist church last evening, when Rev. F. H. Brigham, pastor of the church, held a "Fraternal Order Night." The question of the "First Murderer" was taken by the pastor and through the story of the brothers, Abel and Cain, he drew conclusions regarding brotherhood and fraternalism.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" was the question asked and answered by Rev. Brigham in his sermon. According to the speaker, the real obligation of heavenly brotherhood was to recognize good when we find it, and that the highest test of brotherhood is to bring aid to another when in need. The address in part was as follows:

"The Book of Genesis has less authority than it formerly did, but still the story stands in its moral teaching for it is the real beginning of things, the beginning of God. He created man in his own image. He put man on earth to rule. He put two ways of life, or courses before us, the good and the evil. Thank God for that. He made us free to choose, therefore man is more than a mere machine, for it is up to him himself to select which way or path he cares to follow."

The first murder. Abel and Cain were the first two sons. Both of them brought the fruit of their labors to offer to God. The offering of Abel, a most sincere one, was accepted, but the offering of Cain was not accepted. Why? Simply because Cain's deeds were evil and his heart is never acceptable to God even though the gift prove tempting. Then the two brothers quarreled and Cain in a moment of passion slayed his brother Abel. This was the first murder.

"The Voice of God said unto Cain: 'Where is thy brother?' 'I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?' 'Fraternal men, you have confessed you are your brother's keeper. You are responsible to other men, for that is brotherhood. The man who needs your help challenges you for aid. The same principle applies universally for every man is under obligation to other men to help one another.

"The brotherhood of modern times is even a greater degree. In child labor we find man building palaces out of the blood of children. Christ sees this. God asks the man who is grinding the wheel in the wheels of industry: 'Where is thy brother, where are those children whose full life is denied them through your greed for money?' 'The manufacturer, 'Am I my brother's keeper?' The public is beginning to answer 'yes,' and if you will not be responsible the law will make you assume the obligations of brotherhood to protect and care for your employees.

"In Janesville there are men who are making gain, money, out of what we know causes harm to the city. The accurate records of the city show the partake of strong drink. But did he look beyond his own right and see a weaker brother following in his footsteps, with less power and backbone to resist the temptations, is it your duty, as brothers, and as a fraternal organization, to remove every stumbling block to every man. You are your brother's keeper and you are responsible for the obstructions to your brother in the pursuit of things which will mean life as it should be.

"The church of the living God is the greatest exemplification of what fraternal order stands for: in the world. The principle laid down by God is that the church is the one institution solely for the uplift of man. Its doors are open. There are no blackballs. It is for every one.

"All fraternal men should be in a church with all their power, strength and spirit of brotherhood. The crown of brotherhood should lead to Christ and His church."

TWO YOUTHS ARE FINED FOR RIDING ON SIDEWALK

"Watch out for the motorcycle cop." This warning spread among the auto drivers Saturday and Sunday with the result that drivers seldom used the streets for a speedyway.

Two youths were arrested by a motorcycle officer, and both appeared in court this morning. Fern Wood was up for riding a bicycle on a sidewalk for the second time and was fined two dollars and costs for the city ordinance violation. The total penalty amounted to $4.40. Raymond Dutton also pleaded guilty to the same charge and was fined one dollar and costs, amounting to $3.40. A number of auto owners were given warning to cut down on the speeding by the officer, but no one was arrested.

RUN INTO VEHICLE WITH STOLEN AUTO

Car Owned by Julius Mosser Stolen From Milwaukee Street Saturday Night.

Two men stole a Ford car owned by Julius Mosser, 859 South Main street Saturday night between nine and ten o'clock from the corner of Milwaukee and Jackson street, a block from the police station, only to meet with an accident to the stolen car near Beloit, which forced them to abandon the machine. The police here learned of the theft shortly before ten o'clock and sent out the alarm in southern Wisconsin to watch for the machine.

A few hours later they received word that a Ford touring car had smashed into a farmer's buggy between Afton and Beloit, and that two men had left the car, escaping across fields toward Beloit. The stolen auto was damaged by the collision with the buggy, having the windshield shattered, and front badly battered. The two men, a man and woman, were thrown out of the man receiving minor injuries. The Beloit authorities followed the two alleged thieves across the muddy field by the tracks, but lost trace of them when they started down the road toward Beloit. Search was made for them in the Line City Sunday and today. The auto, a man and woman, have been brought back to its owner in this city.

It was reported to the police that an unknown woman stood at the west end of the road, and saw the two men cranking the machine. They had trouble in starting the motor, and the smoke coming from the exhaust stove revealed her or other pedestrians obtaining a good description of the men.

ECONOMY.

Economy is not a natural instinct, but the growth of experience, example and forethought. It is also the result of education and intelligence. It is only when men become wise and thoughtful that they become frugal; hence the best means of making men and women provident is to make them wise.—Samuel Smiles.

Saturday's Market. Chicago, April 3.—Saturday's hog receipts totaled only 6,000 and prices advanced 10¢ to $9.50, selling at $9.50. Most of the $9.50 carried over from Friday were held off the market. Last week's arrivals of swine were smallest in four months and the estimated average weight at 210 lbs. was 11 lbs. lighter than previous week, against 234 lbs. a year ago. Closing cattle trade extremely dull, yet March average price of beef steers at $9 was $1.25 above a year ago and highest on record for March. Average price of sheep and lambs last month at $8.20 and $11.10 respectively, stood higher than previous month in trade history. Hog average at $9.50, second highest on record for March.

P. W. Waddell marked 50,000 hogs for today, E. R. Gettruy 47,000; Fred Sawyer, 40,000; G. F. Swift, Jr., 35,000; Milt Minter, 33,000, and William Garrett, 30,000.

MADISON PARK AGAIN WELCOMES DREAMERS

Derelicts Return to Park Benches
With Coming of Spring Days—
Interacting New York
Gossip.

New York, April 1.—The birds and the derelicts are to be seen again on Madison Park—a sure evidence that spring with its flowers and its grasses and its waving trees is on its way. The birds have come from their migratory flights to the south. The derelicts have returned to their winter quarters in the park, and in vast numbers they have re-inhabited the park. Obedient to the impulse of depressed and agitated minds the derelicts seek solace when nature is at its best. In the early morning the birds in recognition of their acquaintance of other years sing their songs, but the day-dreamers of the park benches appear oblivious to song and signs of gladness. If they come to sit and dream. If the birds give it up, the noon day orators might be considered as a relief crew for the feathered songsters. Even they, with their shrill voices and their declarations that by making the rich poorer the poorer will become richer, fail to interest the dreaming relics of the park benches. Only hunger or thirst can drive them from their positions, and they wander down to the bread line in Eleventh street, and back through the Bowery, returning hours afterward from their circuit and to find a majority of the derelicts on the park benches, and their faces and their dresses are suggestive of night gowns. Madison Park is one of the most interesting spots in the city. It is in the shadow of one of the biggest life insurance buildings in the world. It adjoins Madison Square Garden, the scene of many of the great athletic contests of modern history, including the recent Willard-Moran fight. In two weeks during the past month three-quarters of a million dollars was raised there for the relief of war sufferers in Germany. Stanford White was shot on its roof; the big cruises open within its spacious walks every spring. Wilson, Bryan, Roosevelt and Taft have had their campaigns in the park. It is a world-renowned structure. The warm summer evenings will soon be here and a thousand derelicts will register at the park each evening for a night's lodging on the benches. Self-respecting citizens do not linger in Madison Park, but it, like the Bowery, is one of the biggest and most interesting sights of what is now the world's greatest city.

The last frontier near Hudson's Bay is the newest sportsman's paradise opened to New Yorkers by railroad pioneers, according to James A. Cruikshank of this city, who has just returned on travels of 4,000 miles through the region. So abundant is the game that the construction trains of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, on which he traveled killed several moose, and shooting and fishing from private cars on sidings of the new line will, he says, afford prolific game. Caribou, red deer, bear and moose have returned to old haunts from which they were scattered by the construction crews. "The waters are also very abundant in trout and black salmon trout, some of the size of 30 pounds," Mr. Cruikshank says in his report. Sewing machines and taking machines, which "The Hudson Bay" was the first to introduce as far north as the Hudson Bay district were novel features of his long trip by canoe, freight canoe and motor launch. He also reported that the Muskoka "Whispering" was the first to be introduced into the Hudson Bay district. His report adds: "About one hundred miles east of Cocinaro, the Muskoka and the Hudson Bay are the most beautiful and continues as far as Graham. The most sporting regions on the American continent. The Hudson Bay affording canoe cruises to Hudson Bay or circular trip coming back to the railroad, thousands of people are taking through cruises made in almost every direction. The Hudson Bay is the breeding ground of the greatest brook trout on the continent. The Nipigon red-spotted, square-jawed brook trout."

Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the president, is the leader in a progressive new movement that demands school reform, and she has followed up the work recently inaugurated in Washington, appearing in New York as the champion of the Washington Irving High School Labor Bureau, in their struggle to retain the use of the school room for their recreation and training. Miss Wilson's work may have a tendency to nationalize what at first was a matter concerning only the District of Columbia. It appears that the school board in Washington refused to permit the parents to continue their meetings in ten of the school buildings, and there was a sensation in the capital when the President's daughter demanded to know whether the schools belonged to the people to do with as they liked, or whether they were the property of the school board. She has carried her fight to congress, where a bill is pending compelling the school board to permit the use of the schools for parents' meetings. Such a law would apply to the city of Washington. In following up her work in New York city Miss Wilson is making the plea that public educational institutions will not have fulfilled their mission until the citizens of the communities have made them the means of educating them, as well as their children.

When Doctor Felix Adler opens the sessions of the American Ethical Union in this city Sunday, May 14, it will inaugurate a celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the ethical culture movement in America. Doctor Adler was the founder of the movement, and has been its principal leader from the beginning. It is needless to say that the ethical culture movement is one of the most important of the present day, and women who have adopted his teachings in favor of higher moral standards and better intellectual conditions are doing much to advance the cause of the world.

One of the largest checks that has ever been paid in the United States passed through the New York clearing house during the past week. It called for the transfer of funds amounting to $43,538,131.11 in payment for bonds of one of the steel companies which have recently been sold by a syndicate of bankers. So far as could be recalled, there have been only four other checks drawn in the whole history of American finance for amounts approaching that represented in this check. The largest check which has ever been drawn in this country was for $62,075,000 in payment for a sale of bonds for one of the large railroad companies, which also received a check for $49,000,000 early last year as a result of bond issue. In May, 1914, the secretary of the treasury came to New York with a check for $40,000,000 which the United States government paid to the French syndicate in the Panama Canal purchase. In the same year a check for $40,000,000 was turned over to the Mexican government in connection with an issue of Mexican bonds.

INFORMATION OF CONDITIONS IN EUROPE TO BE OBTAINED IN CHARITIES CONVENTION

Chicago, April 3.—First hand information of conditions in the European countries now at war will be obtained at the forty-third annual meeting of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections at Indianapolis May 10 to 17, according to the program made by W. T. Cross, general secretary of the organization, here today. Ernest P. Bicknell, director of civilian relief of the American Red Cross, has accepted an invitation to speak at the conference and will deliver an address at the opening session on the subject of war relief.

Mr. Bicknell visited all the main war fronts in Europe in supervising the distribution of American contributions for the war sufferers. He was in Belgium a few months after the opening of hostilities and later passed through both the Russian and German lines on the east front in an effort to provide relief for the Polish war victims. On several occasions he came close to the firing lines and was able to observe conditions in regions where the contending armies had recently passed.

The conference will bring together leaders in other branches of the charitable and correctional work. The United States government will furnish its share. Among the Federal officials taking part will be Miss L. L. Chapin, chief of the Federal Children's bureau; Anthony Caminetti, United States Commissioner of Immigration, and Philander C. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education.

FRENCH SURGEONS CONSIDER NEW HELMET A SUCCESS

Paris, April 3.—Surgeons consider the success of the new helmet of the French army so effective that the possibility of a return to the old days when the chest and abdomen were also protected by armor is being seriously discussed. Doctor Roussier has just stated before the medical academy that the number of men sent to the hospitals with slight scalp wounds doubled between the month of August when the helmet was first put into use and the month of January when the army was still only partially equipped with it. This enormous increase is supposed to indicate that the percentage of dead from bullets and shell fragments in the head has diminished in a corresponding proportion.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT—Written and publication authorized by Judge Turner, Milwaukee and to be paid for by him at the rate of $8.71 per inch.

Why Judge Turner Should Be Elected JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT

1—Excellent character as man and citizen.

2—High standing and large experience as lawyer—vigorous, industrious, capable.

3—Unsurpassed record for eight years as Circuit Judge.

4—A strictly non-partisan and non-factional candidate. The first Democrat to announce his candidacy because it was conceded by nearly all Republicans that a Democrat should be elected in order to preserve the non-partisan character of the court.

5—The most widely and most favorably known of all the candidates, having received nearly fifty thousand votes when last elected Circuit Judge. Now recommended for election by leading lawyers, businessmen and citizens generally, of every political persuasion, creed and nationality.

MACKENSEN IS NOW HERO WITH GERMANS

Rivals Hindenburg as a National Hero Because of Service in the Fighting.

Berlin, April 3.—It is doubtful whether any popular national hero in Germany is in general as little known, either in Germany or abroad, as General Field Marshal von Mackensen, who was instrumental in driving the Russians out of Galicia and to whose credit the conquest of Serbia lies.

Hindenburg, when the war began, was an unknown but the public quickly familiarized itself with every detail of his life when his victories at Tannenberg and Masurian Lakes made him an idol of all Germany. Mackensen, however, has been a rival for public affection at present was only a name until the summer of 1915, and despite his great reputation, is little more now.

Countless streets all over Germany have been named after Hindenburg; statues already have been erected to him; he is weekly in receipt of requests to allow the use of his name in this or that connection. Mackensen, however, though certainly a rival of Hindenburg insofar as military achievements are concerned, is still far behind him when it comes to popular esteem or idolatry.

Mackensen's pictures, however, are to be seen everywhere. They perhaps are responsible for an impression that seems to be almost universal that the field marshal is stern and unapproachable, whereas the opposite is the case. Scarcely any of his innate personal characteristics except that of unusual ability are depicted on his strenuous features.

When Mackensen began to tower above the other German army leaders, by his achievements against the Russians, and his raised in frequent telegraphic messages conferred honor after honor on him, it was a matter of surprise to Germany unfamiliar with Mackensen's career that a warm personal note should manifest itself which had been lacking in earlier messages to Hindenburg.

The surprise came largely from the fact that the general public did not and to a great extent still does not, know how long-standing and intimate are the relations between the Emperor and Mackensen. The latter, surrendering the command of his Body Guard Hussars in 1905, served for a long period as the Kaiser's personal adjutant, and in this position accompanied his chief on the noted trip to the Holy Land.

Few know either how narrowly Germany missed having Mackensen as a great military leader. He is the son of a man who in America would be rated as a gentleman farmer, and himself was trained to take his father's place. Though he emerged from the Franco-Prussian war as a reserve lieutenant, he immediately went back to civil life, in deference to his parents' wishes.

For years he resisted the impulse to go back into the army, and fought with himself a battle which his most enthusiastic biographer describes as a conflict between ideal and reality. His university education, however, because of the war with France, was almost concluded, and he was fast becoming in theory at least a farmer when the opportunity to go back as a line officer into the Imperial Hussars' regiment with which he had served in France arrived once more, and his father reluctantly withdrew his claims to this career.

A number of characteristics possessed by Mackensen stand out prominently, and have stood out ever since he joined the Second Body Guard Hussars on May 13, 1873. Some of them obviously have contributed to his military success, others belong to those peculiarities which successful men in general have.

One of the former category comes, first of all, an astonishing memory which enables him often-times to direct operations without the aid of a map, provided of course that he has at some earlier time studied the territory. A question is frequently asked: might be remarked that he generally has done the studying, for he is a prodigious worker at all times.

Mackensen rarely forgets a name or a face, and including the names of all an astonishing memory which enables him often-times to direct operations without the aid of a map, provided of course that he has at some earlier time studied the territory. A question is frequently asked: might be remarked that he generally has done the studying, for he is a prodigious worker at all times.

GENERAL PETAIN, DEFENDER OF VERDUN, TYPICAL FRENCH OFFICER OF MODERN SCHOOL

Paris, April 3.—General Henri Petain, the defender of Verdun, is typical of the modern French soldier. He is just sixty years of age, and his mission as second lieutenant in 1878, and became a captain in 1880, and a colonel in 1900. He was a colonel when the war began and was going to be a general.

General Petain first distinguished himself in the early days of the war. He became brigadier general and general of division, and rose rapidly to his present position.

He is a curiously modest man and hates being photographed. He is immensely popular with his men whom he treats as though they were his own children. General Petain is very methodical and weighs his food every day, saying that it is as necessary for officers to be in perfect condition as for racehorses. Keeping in condition is his pet hobby. He was turned out of a flat which he occupied once because he insisted on taking half an hour's exercise with a skipping rope after his bath every morning.

The result is that General Petain is as active at sixty as the youngest lieutenant in the French army. Quite recently in Champagne he covered four miles at the double in the lead of a company, and he prides himself on the ease with which he undergoes the same hardships and the same hard work as any man with him.

The general does not believe much in red tape, and wants the most work done in the quickest way. To an officer who asked him to give him a post on the staff, General Petain said, laughing: "I don't need staff officers. The men I want are fellows who can win three mile races afoot and ride motorcycles over rough ground." There is a legend in the Verdun army that General Petain lived and slept on the carriage of a machine gun during the first ten days of the German offensive late last February.

CAMPOR IN ALCOHOL STOPS A LOOPHOLE IN PROHIBITION LAW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] HOULIAM, Wash., April 3.—Gum camphor has plugged the biggest loophole in Washington's prohibition law. Inspired to investigate, by the increasing number of "links," Police Judge Smith learned that grain alcohol was the most popular tipple. This can be purchased in a drugstore if the purchaser swears it is to be used for medicinal purposes. Smith then ordered all druggists to put a few grains of camphor in each flask of alcohol. It isn't poisonous, and some might stand the taste, but it simply won't stay down.

"What! You saved 4 tons with Radiator heating?"

"Say, John, is that right? And you say that the entire house is ideally warmed all over all the time!"

Comfortable party—"Oh, sure, we're warm as toast. Why, listen! Before I discovered the fault in our old-fashioned heating, our home was a regular 'barn.' Wife had a series of colds every winter, and then the kiddies would sniffle with theirs until our house got to be the doctor's hang-out."

Chilled party—"That's the way it is here now with everybody, from the baby up. Something's got to be done or I'll move. Jane says she can't keep good help on account of lifting and sifting coal and ashes, poking and coaxing fires, blackening, and other ills of old-fashioned heating."

Comfortable party—"Stop worrying, old man, and take a hot tip! Let the dealers put radiator heating in your place. It's done in a jiffy, any time of the year—though this is the best time to buy. Get busy and cheer up the old house; besides, it will go up in value just the minute you put in radiators. Everybody wants them nowadays. Twice as easy to sell or rent because folks have wised-up on the great comfort and coal-savings of radiator heat—the biggest home-making feature in the world."

Chilled party (eagerly)—"Say, John, I'll take your advice, and put in those famous chill-chasers—"

GERMAN INDUSTRIES ARE WELDED TOGETHER BY WAR

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Berlin, April 3.—One of the most inevitable industrial consequences of the war will be, in the opinion of Professor Franke, editor of the Sozialistische Monatshefte, the position of employers, individually and as associated in federations. In the course of the war the professor says, the power of the employers has already enormously increased, and although their numbers have been diminished, their strength does not rest so much on their numbers as men, as on the number of their establishments.

It is just this, Professor Franke continues, "these establishments have improved and strengthened their positions, and have increased in concentration. There are now fewer independent groups of industrialists. Unity among them is practically complete, and there can be no longer any doubt that German industrialists after the war will go hand in hand with the agricultural alliances and with the middle class leagues."

The leading men of the most important industries are already stating through the press that their principles remain unchanged, and assume with absolute conviction that they are the masters of the situation. They insist that Social Democracy shall learn a lesson from the war, and resign the principles which have hitherto guided it. But they decline to when peace comes, there will be peace and relief from years of bloodshed, but the war of labor will succeed it, and no one knows whether its battles will lead."

DELAY IN PAYMENTS STOPS IRISH FROM ENLISTING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Dublin, Ireland, April 3.—The O'Connor Don, the Lord Lieutenant of County Roscommon, and one of the most active supporters of recruiting in Ireland, has written to the Dublin press complaining that the promise of support to their dependents made to young Irishmen on enlisting has been very inadequately kept. Delays of months have, he says, taken place in the payments and in many instances the amounts allocated have been totally inadequate. Wounded and discharged soldiers have been returning to their homes in Connaught, and are often sent back totally unfit for work and without any pay or pension being granted to them. The O'Connor Don gives several cases with full particulars in proof of his statements and adds that "with such instances we can scarcely wonder at a falling off in the recruiting returns."

Quick results—that's everybody's experience with want ads.

SOCIALISTS APPOINTED TO EXECUTIVE POSITIONS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Berlin, April 3.—It appears that one effect of the war will be to break the taboo against Socialists in executive positions of city governments. Just now the city of Charlottenburg, has installed a Socialist as an unpaid member of the Council, or executive authority of the city. Frankfurt-on-the-Main has gone still further by electing Dr. Lindemann, of Stuttgart, a former member of the Reichstag, to a paid position on its governing board as a specialist in municipal government.

TALE TELLING HAS CAUSED ARREST BY FEDERAL OFFICERS

TOOK TOO MANY PRIZES IN CONTEST FOR CHICAGO NEWS-PAPER.

LOCAL WOMAN HELD

Taken into Custody and Released on Four Hundred Dollars Bonds—Not First Offense for Suspect.

Because she possesses too lively an imagination, too keen an appreciation of literary values, and too facile a narrative skill, a former Waukegan school teacher living in this city has got into trouble.

Real narrative power is a rare talent, highly prized by everyone, but possessed by a few. In the case of story-tellers with "disordered" imaginations it would seem that an outcropping of story-telling talent would be hailed with joy and put to work.

It was a "true story" contest, and this talented school teacher entered it. She wrote her story, signed her name to it and forwarded it to the Chicago paper.

A second non de plume was affixed to the creation, the child of too profuse an imagination, was made the contest editor of the Chicago paper.

All Three Winners. Stories numbers 1, 2 and 3 won the first three prizes in the contest, in which thousands of other writers were entered.

The Janesville woman got inside the money, as the men say, with both feet and carried it all away. Later when the contest editors discovered that these three successful writers were one and the same person, they promptly demanded her arrest on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

United States Deputy Marshal W. H. Appleby, returning from Leavenworth, Kan., stopped off in Janesville and made the arrest. Upon furnishing the $400 bond demanded, the woman, who lives alone with her mother, in the southeast section of the city, whose name was withheld by the federal authorities, was released to await trial.

POLICE MAKE RAIDS ON THE HOBO CAMPS

Seven Arrested at Stock Yards Hobo Camp Sunday Afternoon.

Four Before Court. Sunday afternoon was one of nature's most pleasurable spring days. It had different effects on different people.

Some attired themselves in their best adornments and exhibited them to the public. Others sought secluded spots and camped in the woods. Still others tried to celebrate spring's coming in the vicinity of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul stock yards yesterday afternoon, but the police "April fools" them.

Officers W. E. Gower and Jay Hymer dropped in among the stock yard jungle tenants and gave them a ride, gratis, to the police station. In the auto patrol of the camp the seven hobo auto riders, but the hobos certainly did not enjoy remaining in the "bull pen" at the city hall for eighteen hours.

This morning the aggregation were being "bushwhacked" for the city before noon, that no house begging would be tolerated, and not to have Janesville on their calling list this summer.

To their promise the police made the rounds of the river banks and jungles where the tramps and riff-raff congregate within the city limits. The seven hobos were all taken to the city hall.

Sam Cooler was arraigned in the municipal court this morning on the charge of escaping confinement while under a six months' commitment law sentence. Cooler was paroled out after his sentence on March twelfth and was arrested Sunday by Patrolman Harry Smith. He demanded an examination on this felony charge and the hearing was set for April twelfth. In default of three hundred dollars bail Cooler was taken to jail until the examination.

A Johnson, a farm laborer, was in court on Friday and was sentenced to pay a fine of ten dollars and costs. He paid his fine. This morning Johnson was "in again." This time the court raised the ante five dollars and costs, but Johnson had to go to jail, until the fine is paid, or serve twenty days.

He is charged with John Maxwell and Robert "Bob" Welsh, charged with second offense drunkenness, was set over until Wednesday, the 12th.

MRS. H. M. WEBER DIES AT CHICAGO; THIRD KIN TO DIE

Wife of Janesville Man Follows in Death on Sunday of Two Relatives of Her Husband.

The death of Mrs. Henry M. Weber, 527 1/2 avenue, wife of Henry M. Weber, of Janesville, who died at Chicago, occurred at 11:20 o'clock last night at a Chicago hospital.

The death of Mrs. William Weber, wife to a son of Henry M. Weber of this city, occurred yesterday morning at Chicago, and William Weber, a brother to Valentine Weber of the Janesville Shirt & Overall company, who is also a resident of Janesville, died yesterday afternoon at Chicago.

The three deaths all occurring on the same day has thrown a shroud of gloom on the Weber families of this city and Chicago. It is a singular coincidence and coming as it is, friends of all families are deeply grieved in their friends' misfortunes.

Mrs. Weber of this city was about forty-six years of age. She was born at Aurora, Ill.

Requiem high mass will be celebrated at St. Alphonsus Catholic church at 10 o'clock today morning.

The body will be brought to Janesville over the Chicago and Northwestern railway tomorrow afternoon and will be buried at the home tomorrow morning.

Mrs. Weber had been in the Chicago hospital for about one week. She underwent an operation following an extended illness. She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Clara and Catherine, and by one son, Henry Weber, Jr., of this city.

WHITE SO START SEASON WITH A VICTORY—WIN 16-8.

The second ward White Sox won their first game of the year this afternoon when they defeated the second ward All-Stars by a score of 16 to 8.

Both teams played good ball all during the game but the pitching of Delbert Townsend was what beat the All-Stars. The White Sox now challenge any team of their size and age to a game to be played on a Sunday afternoon.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Our Mr. Bridges is now in New York. The heavy buying during our Spring Opening necessitated his going there to secure new merchandise in keeping with the high style standards set by this store.

Every woman receives the benefit of Mr. Bridges' many trips to New York when she buys here. There is nothing like keeping in touch with the Eastern markets. So many style changes take place each season that it is hard to keep up with them unless a representative is on the ground and has the latest information. It is our intention to offer the new styles in this store about as soon as they are shown in New York.

COMMERCIAL CLUB DIRECTORS DISCUSS IMPORTANT MATTERS

Considered—Home Coming Idea Given Consideration.

James V. Kuhn, new secretary of the Janesville Commercial club, met with the directors of the club at the regular weekly luncheon and meeting of the board of directors made his formal report to the board as the business representative of the Commercial club.

Mr. Kuhn was introduced to the board and later outlined his policy of co-operation with the club.

Today's session was one of importance. The establishment of the weight to be considered was that regarding the bringing to Janesville of the branch manufacturing plant of the Gossard Corset company.

Chairman M. J. Gossard of the company, who appeared before the directors and reported on the work of securing the fifteen thousand dollars necessary to be raised by public subscription to the plant here.

THE ROCK COUNTY SAVINGS & TRUST CO.

BETTER COUNTY IS RESULT OF CONTESTS

Six County Contests for Betterment of County Are Being Pushed by Janesville Club.

"Make Rock county the best county of them all," is the slogan for all good Rock county citizens. This is also the aim of the Janesville Commercial club and to further out the plan they are under way six county-wide projects, as follows: Alfalfa, good roads, acre reclamation, farm management, ten ear corn, and rural school ground improvement contests. Each of these contests were carried out last year and all finished with great success and much good was done for the county.

Alfalfa Contest. The alfalfa contest is causing the most interest at the present time as it is such an important question to Rock county citizens. This is also the aim of the Janesville Commercial club and to further out the plan they are under way six county-wide projects, as follows: Alfalfa, good roads, acre reclamation, farm management, ten ear corn, and rural school ground improvement contests. Each of these contests were carried out last year and all finished with great success and much good was done for the county.

Good Roads. The good roads contest the last season was most interesting. Many stretches of the dirt roads ordinarily impassable under conditions such as prevailed last season, were not only made passable, but were kept in prime condition for the state roads in the county. It has been suggested that they also be given attention after surfacing so that they may be maintained at a minimum cost. The entire project last season was finally wound up in the fall by all the contestants and those taking a free auto trip to Madison to meet the governor and visit the capitol building and the university.

The Commercial club committee on this contest held a meeting last Wednesday and plans were made out for the 1916 contest. The date for the start of this contest has not been set yet, but will be soon during the month of May.

The farm management contest of last year closed last Thursday with a rousing meeting with the contestants held at Beloit under the auspices of the Beloit Business Men's association. In this county project over seventy-five farmers have enrolled for the 1916 contest and it is the most interesting year in the work. The purpose of the contest is to get farmers interested in the study of their farms, to keep records and to ascertain what part of their work is the most profitable. Valuable prizes have been offered in this contest by the Janesville Commercial club.

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to
MRS. THOMPSON
In care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a man twenty-six years old. I went with a girl twenty-eight years old, and she loved me. I loved her too, and we went together.

any longer and she wants to leave him, but he told that if she left him he would find her and kill her. I am still in love with her and cannot forget her. She had a way of writing me once in awhile and she wants to come to me. Please tell me what I should do?

UNHAPPY MAN.
The girl should see the prosecuting attorney and tell him her story. If her husband is a dangerous character, he will be taken care of by the authorities. If his treatment of her amounts to extreme cruelty she can secure a divorce. It would be very wrong for her to go to you unless she were legally free.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl of eighteen and I am married to a man of twenty-five. We have one blue-eyed girl. I am not happy. My husband loves me, for he goes to the club almost every night and does not get back until after midnight. I really believe he takes other girls into his car and dances with them. Would you leave him or stay for the sake of the little one?

(2) If I get a divorce should I marry again, and how soon?

(3) I broke an engagement with a man before I married my husband, and he is crazy about me. Would it be all right for me to marry him?

(4) If I should stay with my husband you would be all right for this other man to take me to shows and other places when my husband is away?

WONDERING WIFE.
(1) By all means stay with your husband and try to be as lovable as you were before he married you. Make yourself as interesting and attractive as you can and he will lose interest in other women.

(2) Marriage is not the thing to be trifled with that you seem to think it is. If you divorce your husband stay single until you are old enough to realize what true love is and understand that you are dissatisfied and find out why he seems dissatisfied with you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) How can I get acquainted with nice boys and girls?

(2) I love a handsome fellow and love him dearly. How can I get acquainted with him?

(3) If I walk along the street and a strange fellow calls after me to wait for him should I wait?

UNHAPPY.
(1) Go to church and ask the minister to introduce you.
(2) There is nothing you can do to get acquainted. If he cares for you, however, he will find someone to introduce you.
(3) No. Ignore him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please tell me whether it is necessary to have individual salt and pepper shakers, and individual sugar and creamers for each cover at an informal dinner. If not, how many should there be at a table laid for six or eight? B. G.

Two salts, two peppers, one or two sugar bowls and one or two creamers would be enough.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Letters may be addressed to Wm. A. BRADY, M. D., in care of the Gazette.

TECHNIC OF HOME NURSING.

When the doctor, in an emergency, wishes to give the patient a dose of medicine and asks for some water, this is what he wants. One clean, empty glass; one glass full of water; one teaspoon. If he apparently intends to administer the dose himself, hand him a glass not over half full of water. If you've ever tried to drink from a glass full of water without sitting upright in bed, you will know why the glass should be only half full.

In the absence of specific directions it is generally better to administer a dose of liquid medicine in say, one-fourth of a glassful of water. By diluting the dose it is rendered less irritating to the stomach, and if it is bitter medicine the taste is less noticeable. This little point often makes all the difference in the world. The proper way to administer a dose of medicine to a patient in bed is to hold the glass containing the dose in your right hand while you place the left hand under the pillow—not under the head—and raise the head and shoulders slightly from the bed while the patient drinks. And don't try to hurry the process—the medicine will do just as much good if taken leisurely.

Nothing is so essential as a good nurse in the sick-room. Her services are cheap at any price as every experienced invalid knows. She makes all the difference between peevish unrest and peaceful ease. By her skill and faithfulness sickness is made endurable. And that is her calling.

We know nurses—we keep a graduate nurse in the family all the time. We have worked with them, lectured to them, plucked them on examination, and sneaked them through when their papers were a holy fright, because we knew they were competent with their hands even if they couldn't remember a lot of impracticable facts of anatomy, pathology and other medical subjects. And we think nurses in this country are over-trained with theoretical matter; that instead of three years, two years or even one year should be the standard course of training. Nursing, when you come right down to everyday practice, is not a profession at all, but a vocation, a calling. A nurse is a doctor's helper, his skilled assistant. She is not taught to do things on her own initiative—hence nursing is not a profession. One year of practical training in a good hospital, with a course arranged to eliminate a lot of impracticable theory that is now crammed into nurses' heads, should be quite sufficient to make first-class nurses out of intelligent young women.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Deaf-Mute Parents and Normal Children.

How do you account for some deaf-mute parents bearing children with normal hearing and speech?

Answer: The parents' deafism may have been acquired from infantile illness. Anyhow, there is a normal hereditary strain behind the parents.

Nitroglycerin a Dangerous Drug.

Nitroglycerin good for palpitation?

Answer: No, it is not.

The Black List.
Here is another long list of readers who have written to me for advice, but have neglected to enclose the necessary stamped and addressed envelope for reply: J. A. A. B., E. G. H., H. J. R., M. When writing ask the substance of their former letters to avoid confusion.

Household Hints

ECONOMICAL APRICOT PRESERVE.

One pound dried apricots, 3½ pounds sugar, 3½ pints of water, one ounce of sweet almond, juice of one lemon.

Wash the apricots and cut them into quarters. Heat the water to boiling point, pour over the fruit, and leave to soak for twenty-four hours. Put into preserving pan and boil one hour. Add sugar, juice of lemon and 1½ hours. Boil again for 1½ hours. Seal jars when the preserve is cold. The above will make seven pounds of preserves and will keep twelve months.

SALADS.

Fruit Salad—Pulp of one banana; mix with shredded orange or grapefruit; add a few broken nut meats. Sprinkle with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce leaves. This is a good fruit salad.

Pineapple Salad—Dice pineapple thoroughly; on a bed of these lay slices of fresh or canned pineapple, a few cherries and a sprinkling of English walnuts. Four mayonnaise over and serve cold.

Russian Salad—Empty can of tomatoes on sieve, drain thoroughly. Spread lettuce hearts on plates to form nests. Fill with large pieces of tomatoes, serve with dressing, which a teaspoon each of chopped olives and small red peppers have been stirred.

STUFFED TOMATO SALAD.

Stuffed tomatoes—Stuff tomatoes to shells with chopped celery and nuts, which may be mixed with salad dressing; serve on lettuce leaves.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

If food scorches or sticks to bottom of aluminum kettle when cooking, use a cloth or scraper to remove it. It will not injure the aluminum.

To remove stains from marble in the bathroom, sprinkle stains with pulverized chalk and wet with ammonia, then scour with a brush and wipe dry. This will take out the worst stains.

If one wishes eggs soft boiled, pour boiling water over eggs, cover pan and leave stand three minutes. Medium cooked eggs, leave stand five minutes. Hard cooked, leave stand ten minutes, and the eggs will be leathery as when boiled on the stove.

When buying oleomargarine, butter, which can be purchased for 25 cents a pound and is also clean and pure, you may make your dishes very palatable and inexpensive.

After beating the hot syrup, just after pouring the hot syrup into the egg, sprinkle one teaspoonful of gelatin into the mixture and continue beating. Makes icing spongy like marshmallow.

Use a bill file for hanging up papers. Fold into original fold and place on hook about one inch below top edge. Hang it up high on wall or back of door where it can be reached with ease. When needed they can be drawn down off the hook at a moment's notice, which is one of the things that are worth while in the daily routine of housekeeping.

THE TABLE.

Halibut Sandwich—Two halibut steaks, one pint oysters, bread crumbs, butter, salt and pepper. Put steak in pan, cover with oysters, salt, pepper, bread crumbs and butter. Lay second steak on top, cover with bread crumbs and butter. Add a little water in pan, bake once in a while. Bake one hour.

Potato Balls—Bake cup cold mashed potatoes mixed with one-half cup baking powder. Stir in two beaten eggs, salt; fry by teaspoonful in hot lard.

Bean Relish—One pint navy beans, two onions cut fine, one quart can tomatoes, teaspoon salt, tablespoon pepper. Boil all together. This is good on a cold day, make right.

Bean and Tomato Pie—Mash two cupsful of boiled potatoes, brush with salt and pepper, add one tablespoonful butter if cold potatoes are used, three tablespoonfuls of hot milk also may be added; put a layer of baked or fried beans in a greased fireproof dish, add a layer of canned tomatoes, a layer of fried chopped onions, a sprinkling of salt, pepper and dried herbs; repeat the layers until all are used; cover the dish with the mashed potatoes, brush over the top with beaten egg, dot with small pieces of butter and bake in a hot oven until the vegetables are hot and potatoes nicely browned.

EMPLOY BRITISH WOMEN TO HANDLE COTTON IMPORTS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Liverpool, Eng., April 3.—Women are now being employed at the Liverpool docks, handling cotton imports and other bagged goods.

At the Leyland line docks nearly 100 women are now working. Fears were entertained that the Dockers' union would raise difficulties, but these have been smoothed over and the women are receiving the same rate of pay as the men.

CANDY OR PENNIES?

My small nephew cannot understand why the man at the drug store asked him to give him candy for pennies.

"I should think," he confided to me the other day, "that he'd rather keep the candy. I don't see what he wants with it. I'd much rather have the candy."

My small nephew is a philosopher. At the age of five and a half he has discovered a secret which some people ten times his age have not found out.

"It isn't the money I care about. It's what you can buy with it," he has said. He has discovered the value of money, and yet every once in a while I meet a person who announces that self-evident fact with philosophical discovery.

He Hasn't Learned the Possibilities of Money.

To return to my small nephew, he really doesn't deserve the credit of having discovered the value of money, for it is only because he hasn't yet learned its value in the world of men, but because he has learned to discern its value.

Which brings me to the point I started to discuss, namely, the surprisingly vague ideas of money and values held by the average child in a civilized family.

At five and a half one does not expect much, but it was a boy of nine in my neighbor's family who, on being told that his father could not give him something because he did not have the money, answered, "Well, why doesn't he go into some bank and get some?"

A Five Hundred Dollar Necktie for a Child.

As I look back upon my own childhood I am conscious of a chaos of vague ideas on the subject of money and values from which I have never been able to extricate myself. I was trailing behind my mother through the shops when it happened, so I presume I must have been beyond the lead-by-the-hand stage, perhaps. I remember I saw several strings of yellow beads in front of

MY RESOLUTION.

I have made a resolution, and I'm going to put it through, I am going to cash for keeps on my resolve; it is not a New Year's promise that I'm going to woe you too—nothing difficult to keep or hard to solve. It is not the water wagon stunt of leaping on and off, or the tidings I have canned the cigarette; neither is it handing you the bunk, that I shall ever scoff at the stunts, which prove I have some rooms to let. But this little resolution that I am about to make, if indulged and kept will surely win the day, it will bring success to any one inclined this step to take—they will beat it up on easy street and stay. It is simple and it's easy, and I'll make it every morning, and the task imposed by me I'll never shirk, I shall keep my resolution to fulfill it I have sworn, "I've resolved to be more faithful to my Link Single work."

which hung a placard stating that the price was thirty-five cents.

I was greatly excited. To me a string of beads, a necklace, and a watch were something that cost hundreds of dollars, and here they were to be had for thirty-five cents. I can remember my excitement, even yet. Now I was in luck, things a child of average intelligence, how had I ever reached that age with such a vague idea of values?

Children Should Have Allowances for Clothes and Incidentals.

Children should have allowances for spending money, no matter how small; they should know something about the family income and their individual share of it. As soon as a child is old enough to have a definite allowance should be made them and they should be allowed to help spend it.

And yet, as I write these conclusions, I am assailed by doubts and questionings. From a common sense standpoint I am right, but there is such a thing as having too much common sense and having it at the wrong time. I have seen a child of ten, think of money and values all the rest of our lives. The world of getting and spending is indeed too much with us. Perhaps we do as well after all to let the child remain as long as he can in his happier world.

With My Letter Friends.

I am very much interested in your article in today's paper (in regard to the woman who loaned money to take liberties with her and then blames them) and would like to say that I think it must be a wonderful thing to be a man and to have the power to do as we please with the money we have, to do as we please with the money we have, to do as we please with the money we have.

Adam blamed Eve, but as I understand the Bible, God punished them both. I believe He requires just as much of men today as He did then.

Kidnaped by MRS. EVA LEONARD

Neil Morton Had a Theory as to the Baby's Disappearance.

"I can't understand it," seems as if the earth had opened and swallowed her up. We have driven over fifteen miles down the road and called at every house and questioned every one we have met and no one has seen her.

Olivia was wiping the tears from her eyes as she spoke. The strain of the afternoon had been too much for her coming as it had after three days of terror.

The only possible explanation is that she got another chance to ride and was carried along the road without anyone seeing her. The doctor's cheerful tone of the early afternoon was all gone and a settled despair had taken its place. He realized, however, that he must furnish the courage for himself and Olivia, for she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

"Olivia, have you any theory as to who the woman could be?" asked Neil. "There was no doctor on the front seat of the machine might not be."

"No, have you?" Olivia took the handkerchief from her eyes to look at her friend.

"I have been wondering if it might be the first Mrs. Ellison," whispered Neil.

"Why, she's dead!" exclaimed Olivia with a startled whisper. "That was no proof of that. She simply disappeared. The theory was that she was drowned, but the stream was dragged and no sign of her was found."

BABY CARNIVAL HELD IN NEW YORK TODAY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New York, April 3.—Two thousand national and foreign dignitaries, States and First Ladies of the Land, ranging in age from 6 months to a couple of years and all riding in perambulators, will kick and gurgie and coo and babble their way down the length and breadth of Harlem to advertise the Baby Carnival this afternoon.

Mrs. John Purroy Mitchell, wife of Mayor Mitchell and the wives of Borough President Marcus M. Marks of Manhattan and Douglas Mathewson of the Bronx will select the prize infant.

"It is timid," suggested by the present reporter of the event, that friend young Mr. Donald Pierce, aged 24 months, blue eyed and exceedingly fat, not to say roly-poly and bouncing, was the most distinguished baby present.

Donald's mother, Mrs. Pierce, did, with the result that Donald is one of the most experienced paraders in New York not excepting the Ancient Order of Hibernians or the O'Clon Men.

WILSON'S DAUGHTER SOME DIPLOMAT ALSO

Miss Margaret Wilson Engaged in Battle of Politics With Unruly School Board.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, April 3.—President Wilson's daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson, is showing Washington today that her father is not the only member of the White House family gifted with powers to bring congressmen and such into line.

Miss Wilson for some months has been engaged in a battle of politics with Washington's Board of Education, a conservative institution appointed by courts and not responsible to the people. Her battle is about to come to a successful conclusion in the House, where Representative Johnson of Kentucky has introduced a bill intended to bring the Board in line, broaden the school's usefulness and add another scalp to the already large Wilson collection.

Miss Wilson has advanced ideas about a city. She believes school houses may be used to advantage for grown folks as community centers, civic forums and such. The people were in favor of it, all along.

Finally, Representative Crosser of Ohio introduced a bill providing that school houses might be used as civic centers. Senator Hollis sponsored the bill in the Senate. Permission was granted for mothers and fathers to meet at the schools to discuss school affairs, politics, war, and if they wanted to, fashions. Citizens' associations, of which there are about seventy-five, also made use of them.

In the Grover Cleveland school, one of the first to take advantage of the law, the people decided to meet on Sunday afternoon. The Board of Education didn't see it that way. If there were to be any meetings, the Board said, it, the Board, would say when they were to be held.

Miss Wilson went right up and saw the Congressmen about it. She didn't have to go any farther than Johnson of Kentucky, chairman of the District committee.

Early in March (1916) the Board of Education waked up to find that Congress was by way of passing a bill which said that ten schools, in given sections, should be named as community forums.

Further, the bill said specifically that the people in the sections, if they wanted to, organize, could go right ahead. When they were organized, the bill went on, they were to name the time and place of meeting. The Board of Education, left to hold the sack, was told it was made responsible for the plan, and that its duty was to see that nothing went wrong with the plan.

All the board has to do is jump right up and say, "Yes, sir," when a properly organized section wants a desire to meet at the schoolhouse. The bill itself looks innocent enough. It says, in parenthesis, that it was introduced "by request."

General Crandall's tremendous responsibility would not permit him to ignore such a warning, coming even from so low a source. Yet the man found himself groping blindly in the dark before the dilemma presented; he had no foot rule of precept or experience to guide him.

His fruitless searching for a prop in emergency was broken by the appearance of Jane Gerson in the door opening from Lady Crandall's rooms to the right of the library. The girl was dressed for the out-of-doors. In her arm was a fragrant bunch of blood-red roses, spraying out from the top of a bronze bowl. The girl hesitated and drew back in confusion at seeing the room occupied; she seemed eager to escape undetected. But General Crandall smilingly checked her flight.

"I thought you would be out," Jane stammered. "And—"

"And the roses—the general interrupted.

"Yes, for you to enjoy when you should come back." She smiled easily into the man's eyes. "They'll look so much prettier here than in my room."

"Very good of you, I'm sure," General Crandall stammered up to the rich cluster of buds and sniffed critically. Without looking at the girl, he continued: "It appears to me as though you had already made a conquest on the Rock. One doesn't pick these from the cliffs, you know."

"I should hardly call it a conquest," Jane answered, with a sprightly toss of her head.

"But a young man sent you these flowers, a confession!" The general's tone was bantering, but his eyes did not leave the piquant face under the chin summer straw hat that shaded her.

"Surely. One of your own men—Captain Woodhouse, of the signal service." Jane was rearranging the stems in the bowl, apparently ready to accept what was on the surface of the general's smiling.

"Woodhouse, eh? You've known him for a long time, I take it."

"Since last night, General. And yet some people say Englishmen are slow to forget."

"You're laughing again and turned to face him. His voice took on a subtle quality of polite insistence: "Surely you met him somewhere before Gibraltar."

"How could I when this is the first time Captain Woodhouse has been out of Egypt for years?"

"Who told you that?" The general was quick to catch her up. The girl felt a swift stab of fear. On the instant she realized that here was a serious attempt to drive into the mystery which she herself could not understand, but which she had pledged herself to keep inviolate. Her voice trembled in her throat as she answered:

"Why he did himself, General."

"He did, eh? Gave you a bit of history on first meeting. Confiding chap, what? But you, Miss Gerson—you've been to Egypt, you say?"

"No, General."

"Jane was beginning to find this cross-examination distinctly painful. She felt that already her pledge to the general was involving her in a situation the significance of which might prove menacing to herself—and one other. She could sense the beginnings of a split between her sense of duty and her sympathy for the gentle, elderly gentleman, her host."

"Do you know, Miss Gerson?" he was speaking soberly now—"I believe you and Captain Woodhouse have met before."

"You're at liberty to think anything you like, General—the truth or otherwise." Her answer, though given smilingly, had a sting behind it.

"I'm not going to think much longer. I'm going to know." He clasped his lips shut over the last word with a smack of authority.

"Are you really, General Crandall?" The girl's eyes hardened just perceptibly. He took a turn of the room and paused, facing her. The situation passed him no more than it did his latest guest, but he knew his duty and doggedly pursued it.

"Come—come, Miss Gerson! I believe you're straightforward and sincere or I wouldn't be wasting my time this way. I'll be the same with you. This is a time of war; you understand all that implies. I hope, a serious one. I'm going to know." He clasped his lips shut over the last word with a smack of authority.

"General Crandall," she began, "my training in Hildebrand's store hasn't made me much of a diplomat. All this war and intrigue makes me dizzy. But I know one thing: this isn't my war, or my country's, and I'm going to follow my country's example and keep out of it."

General Crandall shrugged his shoulders and smiled at the girl's defiance.

"Maybe your country may not be able to do that," he declared, with a touch of solemnity. "I pray for peace. But I'm afraid my resolution will not hold, Miss Gerson."

"I'm going to try to make it, anyway," she answered.

Gibraltar's commander, baffled thus by a neutral—a neutral fair to look on in the bargain—tried another tack. He asked the lady to help him.

"Lady Crandall and I have tried to show you we were friends—tried to help you get home," he began.

"Jane has been very good to me," Jane broke in feigningly.

"What I say now is spoken as a friend, not as governor of the Rock. If it is true that you have met Woodhouse before—and our conversation here verifies my suspicion—that very fact makes his word worthless and releases you from any promise you may have made not to reveal this and what you may know about him. Also it should put you on your guard—his motives in any dealings he may pay you can not be above suspicion."

"I think that is a personal matter I am perfectly capable of handling," Jane's resentment sent the flags to her cheeks.

General Crandall was quick to backwater: "Yes, yes! Don't misunderstand me. What I mean to say is—"

"For the present, Miss Gerson, we'll drop this matter. I said a few minutes ago I intended shortly to know. I hope I won't have to carry out that threat."

"Jane was withdrawing one of the buds from the jar. At his last word, she dropped it with a little gasp.

"Threat, General?"

"I hope not. Truly I hope not. But, young woman—"

"She stopped, picked up the flower, and was setting it in a buttonhole before he could remonstrate.

"This one was for you, General," she said, and the truce was sealed.

"Thirteen, Lady Crandall was waiting into the room a breeze of her own staccato interruption.

"What's this—what's this! Flirting with poor old George—pinning a rose on my turned-back miss. I'm here to take you off to the gardens at once, where you can find somebody younger—and not near so dear—to cavillate with your tricks. At once, now!"

"She had her arm through Jane's and was marching her. An exchange of glances between the general and Hildebrand's young diplomat of the dollar said that what had passed between them was a confidence."

Jaimie Khan announced, Major Bishop to the general a short time later. The major, a round pink-faced man of forty, who had the appearance of being ever lubed and greased in the pink of parade perfection, saluted his superior informally, accepted a cigarette and crossed his plumed legs in an easy chair near the general's desk. General Crandall folded his arms on his desk and went direct to his subject.

"Major, you were here on the Rock seven years ago, you say?"

"Yes, sir, General. Regular rock scorpion—old-timer."

"Do you happen to recall this chap Woodhouse whom I sent to you to report for duty in the signal tower to-day? Has transfer papers from Wady Halfa?"

"Haven't met him yet, though Captain Carson tells me he reported an hour ago—see him after parade, Woodhouse—Woodhouse." The major tapped his chin in his fingers in thought.

"His papers—army record and all that—say he was here on the Rock for three months in the spring of nineteen-seventeen. General Crandall urged, to refresh the major's memory."

Major Bishop stroked his round cheeks, tugged at one ear, but found recollection difficult.

"When I see the chap—so many coming and going, you know. Three months? That's a thin slice out of ten years."

"Major, I'm going to take you into my confidence," the senior officer began; then he related the incident of Captain Woodhouse's arrival and the charge he had made. Bishop sat against the wall, his eyes on the general's face.

"Woodhouse will be here to tea this afternoon," continued Crandall. While you and I are having our evening tea, I'll have Jaimie, my Indian, search his room in barracks. I trust Jaimie implicitly, and he can do the job smoothly. Now, Bishop, what do you remember about nineteen-seventeen?"

"The younger man knuckled his brow for a minute, then looked up brightly.

"General, Craigen was governor then. But—um—aren't you a bit mild? This asking of a suspected spy to tea?"

"What can I do?" The other replied, somewhat testily. "I can't clap an officer of his majesty's arm into prison on the mere say-so of a drunken outcast who has no proof to offer. I must go slowly. Major, watch for a slip from this Woodhouse. One bad move on his part, and he starts on his way to the firing squad."

Bishop had risen and was slowly pacing the room, his eyes on the walls with many portraits in oils.

"Well, you can't help admiring the new chap," he muttered, half to himself. "Poring his way on to the Rock—why, he might as well put his head in a cannon's mouth."

"I haven't time to admire," the general said shortly. "Thing to do is to act."

"Quite right. Nineteen-seventeen, eh? Um—"

He paused before the portrait of a young woman in a Gainsborough hat and with a sparkling piquant face. "By George, General, why don't you tell me about her?"

"There's a fair test for you, now."

"You mean Craigen's wife?" The general looked up at the portrait quizzically. "Bishop's bones, Bishop."

"Right, but no man ever saw her. Could forget. I know I never can. Poor Craigen!"

"Good idea, thought," the older man acquiesced. "Well, trip him on to the firing squad."

Jaimie Khan appeared at the double doors. "The general sahibs, or derly," he announced. The young subaltern entered and saluted.

"That young man, General Crandall, the one Sergeant Crosby was to escort out of the lines to Algeiras—"

"Well, what of him? He's gone, I hope."

"First train to Madrid, General; but he left a message for you, sir, to be delivered after he'd gone, he said."

"A message?" General Crandall was perplexed.

"As Sergeant Crosby had it and gave it to me to repeat, to you, sir, it was, 'Arrest the cigar girl calling herself Josephine. She is one of the cleverest spies of the Wilhelmstrasse.'"

CHAPTER XIII
Enter, A Cigarette

Mr. Joseph Almer, proprietor of the Hotel Splendide, on Viceroy Street, was absorbed, and soot in a curious task. He was emptying the powder from two-grain quinine capsules on to a sheet of white letter paper on his desk.

Following the arrival of Captain Woodhouse, Almer was alone in the hotel's reception room and office behind the dingy glass partition enclosing his desk. His slipcase-covered shoulders were close to his ears, and his bald head, with its stripes of plastered hair running like thick lines of latrine on a polished globe, was held forward so as to bring his eyes on to work in hand. Like some plump magpie he appeared, turning over bits of china in a treasure house.

A round box of the genuine cocoons lay at his left hand; it had just been delivered by an Arab boy, quick to pick up the street commission for a tip. Very methodically Almer, quipped the capsules from the box one by one, opened them, and soot in a quinine in a little heap under his nose. He grunted peevishly when the sixth shell had been emptied. This seventh capsule brought an eager whistle to his lips. When he had jerked the concentric halves apart, very little powder fell out. Instead, the thin, folded edges of a pellet of rice paper protruded from one of the containers. This Almer had crunched in an instant. He spread it against the black back of a ledger and read the very fine script written thereon.

"This was the message from Almer," Almer had denounced our two friends to Crandall. You must warn; I can not."

The spy's heart was suddenly drained, and the wisp of paper in his hand trembled so it could not hold the outline about in a thin cloud. Once more he read the note, then held a match to it and, scuffed its feathery rush with his feet into the rug beneath his stool. The fortitude which had held Joseph Almer to the Rock in the never-failing hope that some day would bring him the opportunity to do a great service for the fatherland now near crumbling that minute. He grunted.

"Our friends," he whispered, "Woodhouse and Louise—trapped!"

The warning in the note left nothing open to ambiguity. Almer; there were but four of them—"friends" under the Wilhelmstrasse fellowship of danger—there in Gibraltar, the man who passed as Woodhouse, and whose hand was to execute the great deed when the right moment came, himself, and that other whose place was in Government House itself. From this latter the danger of warning had come. How desperate the necessity for it! Almer could guess when he took into account the dangers that beset any attempt at communication on the wireless. The narrow margin of safety for this "friend" that he must look at each setting, as being reasonably the last for him.

Almer did not attempt to go behind the note and guess who was the informer that had lodged information with the government. He had forgotten, in fact, the incident of the night before, when the blustering Capper called the newly arrived Captain Woodhouse by name. The flash of suspicion that attached responsibility to the American girl named Gerson was dissipated as quickly as it came; she had arrived by motor from Paris, not on the boat from Alexandria. His was the imperative duty to carry out the plan, and he was not to waste time in idle speculation as to the identity of the betrayer. There was but one ray of hope in this sudden den of gloom, and that Almer grasped eagerly. He knew the character of General Crandall—the phlegmatic conservatism of the man, which would not easily be jarred out of an accustomed line of thought and action. The general would be slow to leap into an accusation brought against one wearing the stripes of service; and, though he might reasonably attempt to do so, Captain Woodhouse, one such as Woodhouse, chosen by the Wilhelmstrasse to accomplish so great a mission, would surely have the wit to parry suspicion.

Yes, he must be put on his guard. As for Louise, well, it would be too bad if the girl should have to put her back against a wall; but she could be spared; she was not essential. After he had succeeded in getting word of his danger to Woodhouse, Almer would consider having routes from a firing squad. The dimble of light Herr Almer shook itself free from the incubus of dread and leaped to the exigency of the moment. Calling his den waiter to keep warm the chair behind the desk, Almer retired to his room, and there was exceedingly busy for half an hour.

The hour of parade during war time on Gibraltar was one o'clock. At that time, six days a week, the half of the garrison not actually in fighting position behind the great guns of the defense marched to the parade grounds down by the race track and there went through the grilling regimen that meant perfection and the maintenance of a hair-trigger state of efficiency. Down from the rocky eminences where the barracks stood, marched this day black array of olive-drab fighting units—artillery, men for the most part equipped with the rifle and pack of infantrymen. No blare of brass music gave the measure of their step; bandmen in this time of reality paced two by two.

stitchers carried between them. All the curl and snap of silver banners that made the parade a moving spectacle in ordinary times was absent; flags do not figure in the grim modern business of war. Just these solid blocks of men trained to kill, sweeping down on to the level grounds and mashing, rank on rank, for inspection and the trip-hammer pound-pound-pound of evolutions to follow. Silent integers of power, flexing their muscles for the supreme test that any morning's sun might bring.

Mr. Henry J. Sherman stood with his wife, Kitty and Willy Kimball had developed a surprising interest in one of these home folks, at least—under the shade of the row of plane trees fringing the parade grounds. They tried to persuade themselves that they were seeing something worth while. This pleasing fiction was shattered when Mr. Sherman before fifteen minutes had passed.

"Shucks, mother! The boys at the national-guard encampment down to Galesburg fair last year made a better showing than this." He pursed out his lips and regarded a passing battalion with a critical eye.

Mrs. Mary A. Dean, Taunton, Mass., in her 87th year, says: "I thought I was beyond the reach of medicine, but Foley Kidney Pills have proven most beneficial to my case."

Mr. Sam A. Hoover, High Point, N. C., writes: "My kidney trouble was worse at night and I had to get up from five to seven times. Now I do not have to get up at night, and cannot sleep so soundly. I attribute this to Foley Kidney Pills, as I have taken nothing else."

Mrs. M. A. Bridges, Robinson, Mass., says: "I suffered from kidney ailments for two years. I commenced taking Foley Kidney Pills ten months ago, and though I am 61 years of age, I feel like a 18-year-old girl."

Foley Kidney Pills are tonic, strengthening and up-building, and restore normal action to the kidneys and to a disordered and painful bladder. They act quickly and contain no dangerous or harmful drugs.

When Greece, her knee in supplication bent,
Should tremble at his power:
He only got as far as the third line when he began to hesitate. Twice he repeated "Greece, her knee," and then stopped dead.

The old professor beamed on him over his glasses, and then dryly remarked: "Greece her knee once more, Theodore. Perhaps she'll go easier then."

The applicant for chauffeur interviewed Mrs. Newrich.

"We call our servants by their last names," she said. "What's your name?"

"You had best call me Thomas."

ma'am," replied the applicant.

"No, we insist that you be willing to be called by your last name. Otherwise you won't do at all."

The chauffeur said that he was willing to be called by his last name, but didn't think the family would like to use it.

"What is your last name, then?" said his prospective employer, some what coldly, as though she expected a revelation of intercontinental scandal.

"Darling, ma'am, Thomas Darling."

"They say that even waste paper has gone up in price on account of the war."

"Glad to hear it. I've got a lot of mining stock I'd like to dispose of."

Hanson—How did you come to marry the Widow Boncourt instead of her daughter? I thought it was the daughter you were after. Janson—Well, so I was, to tell the truth, but when I asked Marie to marry me on my day she said, "Ask mamma," and when I started to do it I stammered so with nervousness that mamma said "Yes" before I had the question out.—Paris Journal.

COUNTRY NOW FREE OF STOCK PLAGUE; QUARANTINE LIFTED

Long Fight Against Foot and Mouth Disease Is Ended and Last Restrictions Are Removed.

The long fight against the foot-and-mouth disease is over. The secretary of agriculture has issued an order which on March 31 removed all foot-and-mouth quarantines and restrictions against shipment and movement of live stock. The order signed specifically removes the quarantine from a small territory in Christian county, Illinois, the last area which was under suspicion. Along with the removal of this local quarantine, the various federal orders restricting shipment of cattle are rescinded, so that dealers can now ship their cattle as before the first quarantine was imposed.

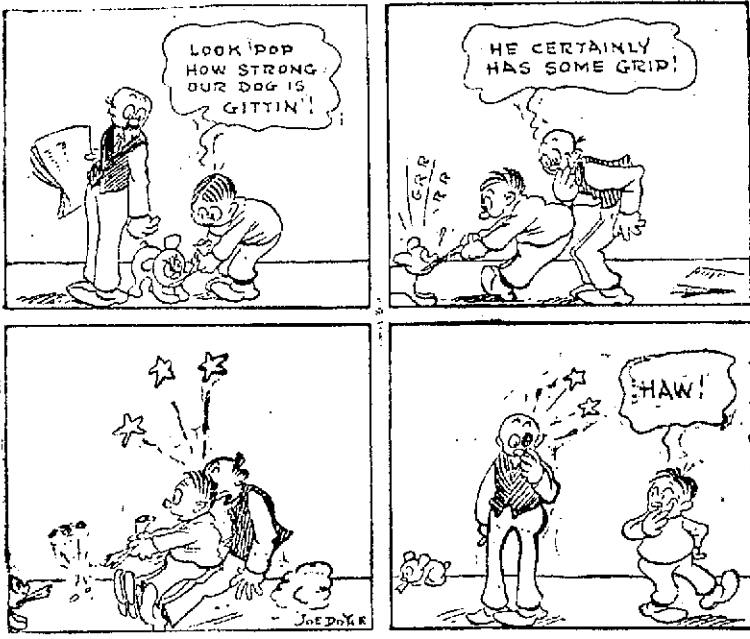

Upon notification that the United States is free from the disease, all foreign governments which have placed embargoes on American cattle are expected to remove these embargoes, so that cattle raisers will be able to resume shipments to these foreign countries.

The magnitude of the work of eradication and control carried on by farmers, shippers and the state and federal governments, is shown by the fact that before control of the disease had gained a temporary footing in twenty-two states and the District of Columbia, the disease appeared and was controlled in 269 different counties.

The importance to the stock raising industry of eradicating foot-and-mouth disease may be judged from the results of this plague in Denmark, where the disease appeared at about the same time that it broke out in the United States. The area of Denmark is approximately equal to that of the three New England states—Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island. It is, however, a great dairying country, and it has been estimated that the losses in milk in one year caused by the foot-and-mouth disease have amounted to approximately one-third of the total cost of eradicating the pestilence in twenty-two states of this country. The Danish authorities were unable to carry out their former policy of slaughter, and were compelled to resort to such measures of control as could be established by quarantines and other restrictions.

As a result of better understanding between the state and national governments, representatives of the department believe that many of the obstacles which confronted the authorities in the past outbreak would not be encountered in dealing with any future occurrence of the disease. The veterinarian, however, will not abate their watchfulness for some time. Examination of animals and animal products offered for import will continue to be unusually strict. The department, moreover, particularly urges all farmers and cattle handlers to notify their state veterinarians and the department of any suspicious cases of sore mouth combined with lameness in their animals. Those in charge of the eradication work are confident that the disease is wiped out, but they wish to use every precaution to detect and control any sporadic cases that may develop in remote districts.

UPLIFTING.

One thing is plain—namely, that the person who lays open his doubts and distresses in prayer with feeling and sincerity must necessarily, in the act of doing so, purify his mind from the dross of worldly passions and interests and bring it into that state where the resolutions adopted are likely to be executed rather than from a sense of duty than from any inferior motive.—Walter Scott.

MORAL COURAGE.

THIRTEEN PER CENT OF GERMAN PEOPLE ENGAGED IN WAR

About 9,000,000 Men Are Actually Employed on Battle Fronts and in Munition Factories.

(Special to THE GAZETTE.)

Berlin, April 3.—An idea is current in America that the entire German race is mobilized for war. The idea, of course, is quite wrong. More than 85 per cent of the population is not engaged in fighting or in any sort of war work.

Germany really concerns herself in war with the 9,000,000 males of military age, of these is computed that close upon a million are physically inefficient for war work, or render themselves so, or by influence, special occupations, etc., obtain exemptions. Mobilization is thus connected with about 8,000,000 males, or 13 per cent of the entire population. In this number are included the munition workers, who in the full swing of war, and taking allied trades into account, may be set down at 1,000,000.

For the rest of the population war service is largely a personal affair in which the state can do very little beyond seeking to minimize losses and suffering due to dislocation of affairs. The first effect of war was to draw nearly 8,000,000 men from productive or civil employments. If these went on as usual, the men in places would require substitutes. No special organization is needed to bring this about. The automatic attraction of higher wages for poorer quality workers established the adjustment of labor as far as it is possible. Casual labor, female labor and in efficient labor get their chance, but the results are not so good, and the German state is unable to supply the demand. The male labor for war service cannot maintain the usual industries of the country at the normal pitch of efficiency.

Germany, moreover, has not the power to maintain her industries at any price, for her markets are closed, and the British navy has practically stopped her export trade, whilst it has enabled Great Britain to do a fair amount of exporting. Thus the great economic problem for Germany today is how to keep the bulk of her population productively employed, while as in Britain the problem is to find workers.

Over 50 per cent of the German population was normally engaged in industry, trade and agriculture. They were largely concerned with the immense export trade of Germany, which by 1914 would have amounted to about $2,500,000,000 for the year. The best markets for German goods were Russia, the British Empire, France and Italy; but Germany has now lost all her trade with them. The British navy has accounted for most of the remainder. It is utterly impossible for the German state to provide a substitute for the vanished export trade. This immense business had built up Germany's wealth. Now her factories have no productive work to do, her civilian useful workers and traders are idle, her great commercial harbors are stagnant. The silent pressure of the British navy pushes back the German sea traffic which otherwise might be distributing German goods.

REFRIGERATOR SERVICE BY MAIL IS PLANNED

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

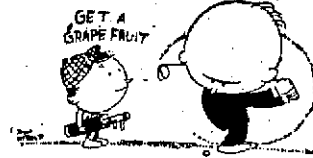

Washington, April 3.—Refrigerator mail service may soon be a reality, if the recommendations of Postmaster Collins of Kansas City, Mo., receives the official Washington O. K. A letter from him today asked the department for permission to install cold storage facilities in the postoffice to protect the produce shipped through the "farm-to-table" exchange of the parcel post. Then in summer, if the housewife is not at home when the postman delivers the dressed spring fry, or the butter just from the farm, he will take it back to the office and put it on ice.
